NOTE

This list of official publications of American constitutional conventions was originally prepared for use in The Newberry Library in connection with certain processes of acquisition and printed as its Bulletin number four. It has now been revised, expanded and certain features added in order to make it of service to the reference divisions and also to students who visit the Library for the purpose of investigating and studying the constitutional history of the several states of the Union.

The work of preparing and compiling the list has been done wholly by Dr. Shearer, a member of the library staff.

FOREWORD

This list comprises all known official publications of state constitutional conventions. Included are state publications, official reprints, and documents in other volumes (as historical society collections and congressional documents), but not material in legislative records, such as that providing for the calling of conventions and for amendments.

Our Bulletin number four, published in 1915, listed 557 different titles, which, with their republication in new editions or other forms, made up 615 numbers. Since that time, 61 additional titles have been found, and three, which were improperly included in the former list, have been omitted from this one. The revised and corrected list, therefore, as it appears in this Bulletin number six, contains 572 titles which, with reprints, etc. make a total of 679 entries.

There is, of course, a great difference in the importance of the works listed, the more valuable being the "Journals", "Proceedings", or "Minutes", and the "Debates". It is hoped that the list of the works of major importance is substantially complete. Of the minor items, it may seem that some are of no importance at all; but as a scholar may approach his subject from any angle, all publications, such as rules, ordinances, reports of committees, speeches, lists of members, where such were separately published, have been included. It will be noted however that the major items are always listed first. As far as possible, where a separately printed title is recorded and numbered in this list and is also to be found in some other publication, such fact is noted. No less than 97 titles, generally minor items, are to be found published also in other forms, usually in the major collections. The constitutions themselves whenever included in Thorpe's edition of "Constitutions and Charters", 7v. 1909 (in U.S. 59 Cong. 2 sess. H. misc. doc. 357) are not listed here.

The material is arranged by states alphabetically, and under each state by the convention or other body chronologically. Titles are in brief, and place of publication is given only when not at the state capital.

For convenience of reference each separate title is numbered even when a reprint or in a collection. The Newberry Library call numbers have been affixed in square brackets and when a copy is not in the Library, but is in Chicago, the location is given. The following letters are used to indicate where the material may be found,—Chicago Public Library, C; Chicago Historical Society, H; John Crerar Library, J; University of Chicago, U.

Besides the copies seen in Chicago libraries, much help was had from certain printed lists, especially from R.R.Bowker's "State Publications", 1908, which gave with accuracy about 400 items; from the New York Public Library Bulletin for April 1904 (265); from the Library of Congress printed cards (259); and from the "Handlist of legislative sessions and session laws... and constitutional conventions", published by the Massachusetts State Library in 1912, which includes 295 items.

In 1915 The Newberry Library had 153 titles. In two years it has added nearly two hundred titles. Since there are but 572 different titles, and since 97 of these are minor ones included in larger works, the Newberry Library collection of over two thirds of the known published material makes it possible for the student of American constitutional conventions to investigate at first hand a wide range of topics within the field.

We gratefully acknowledge numerous helpful suggestions and information of new titles given by the following,—H.O.Brigham, F.N.Thorpe, E.D.Adams, C.H. Hull, J.C.Bullitt, A.E.Lien, I.N.McLeod, G.N.Fuller, E.W.Winkler.
